James Matthews

Born at Sennen, near Lands End Cornwall in 1833, the seventh child of Joseph Matthews and Honor Eddy. The early children of the family were born at St. Levan which is a little nearer to Penzance.

We visited Sennen in 1998. It is a small town in two parts, the cove, known as Sennen Cove, or Whitesands Beach, was a fishing village, now it is more of a holiday town. The beach is sandy, and we saw people with surf boards there. The handful of shops are geared towards holidaymakers. The ground rises very sharply up from the beach, and the houses are perched on the cliffside, with little roads cut into the cliff face. The other section of the town, Sennen itself is on the coast road very near to the Lands End theme park. It seems to be a bleak windy sort of place, with one hotel called the "First and Last", and a stern looking Methodist chapel, which presumably was the Matthews family's church.
